Historical back-test on the NSE universe . generated 2026-09-24 18:31:49 IST

What was tested

pole(>=9.8% locked, 3x vol) -> flag(>=50% give-back, base intact) -> sweep of flag low -> close back above the rail; stop sweep-low - 0.5ATR, target pole high, 60-bar time stop Universe: (from csv) NSE symbols, filters price>Rs 100, mcap>=Rs 1000cr . history from 2016-01-01 to today.

Validation - the detector reproduces the two charts it was built from chart	drift floor (rail)	shakeout	first bullish -> entry	result

NIACL Apr-Jun 2026 - counted in the stats	Rs 154.0	Rs 145.5 (-5.5%)	2026-06-04 @Rs 151.69	target, +3.22R
LAMBODHARA Aug-Sep 2026 - still open	Rs 127.37	Rs 115.57 (-9.3%)	2026-09-18 @Rs 120.21	open, +2.69R

Run `python3 -m nse_scanner.tests.test_exemplars` after any change to `pattern.py` - if these two stop matching, the detector no longer describes the validated pattern and must not be traded. Both names are also on the watchlist (`nse_scanner/universe/watchlist.csv`) so they are force-included in every scan and every back-test, whatever the price or market-cap filter says.

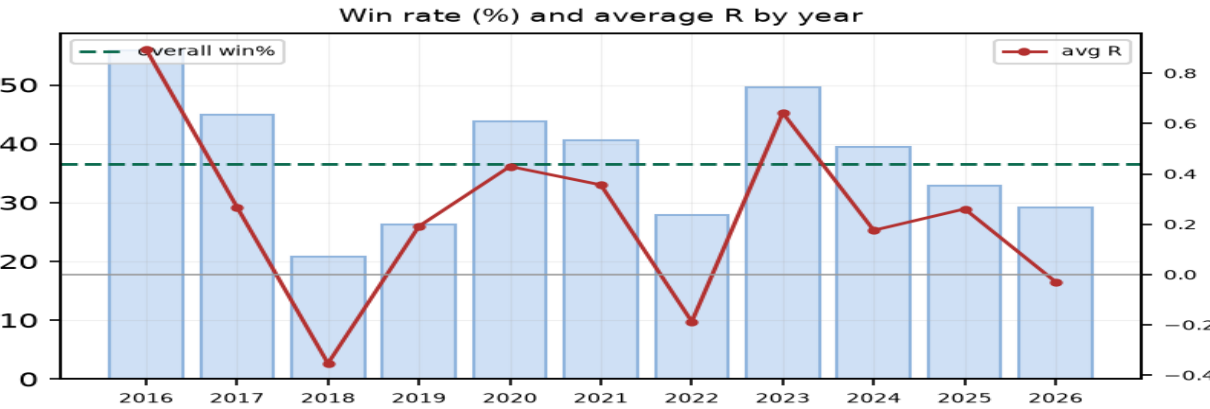

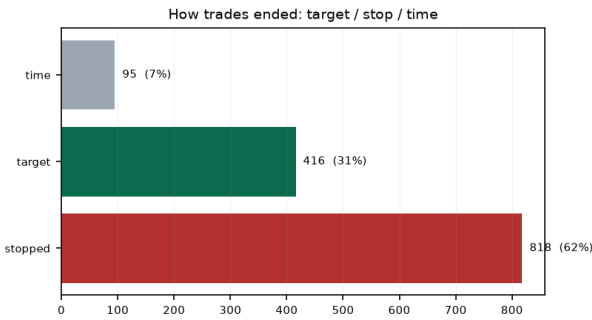

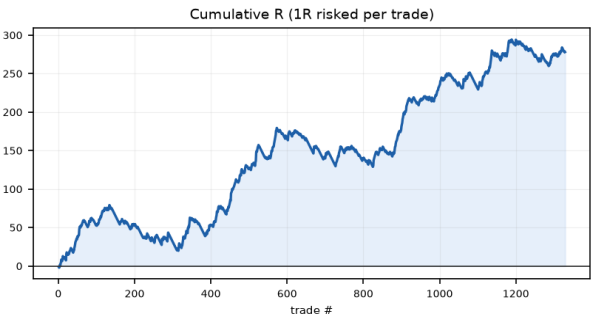

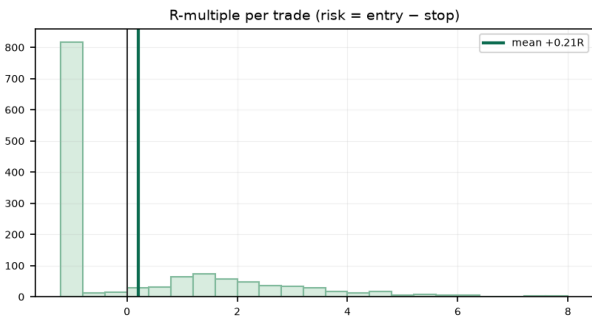

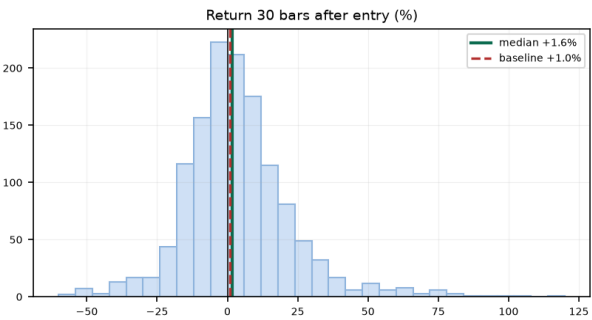

Read it like this: the pattern's median 30-bar return is +1.59% against a market baseline of +1.02% - an excess of +0.57 percentage points. But only +31% of trades reach the pole-high target and +62% are stopped: the edge is a right-tail distribution, so it must be traded as a basket with fixed risk, not as single all-in bets.

Entry-rule comparison

entry rule	trades	median 30-bar ret	avg R	win %	target hit %
first_bullish	1329	+1.59%	+0.21R	+54.8%	+31%
rail_reclaim	854	+0.72%	+0.11R	+51.5%	+60%

first_bullish = buy the first bullish candle after the sweep - this is the rule the live scanner fires. rail_reclaim = buy the first close back above the drift's floor; it is kept in the report only so you can see why the faster rule wins.

Distributions and equity curve

Does the edge survive? - honest assessment

Verdict: the pattern is a reliable timing tool and a weak selection tool. Across 1329 historical trades the median 30-bar return is +1.59% against a market baseline of +1.02% - an excess of only +0.57 percentage points, while the average trade returns +3.74%. Expectancy is +0.21R per trade with +62% of trades stopped. The average is carried by a minority of winners - median R is -1.00.

Which configuration actually holds up configuration	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	avg 30-bar ret	target hit %

A . every signal (no gate)	1329	36%	+0.21	+1.6%	+3.7%	31%
B . shipped profile: quiet reclaim + drift >= 25 bars + shakeout >= 8%	149	42%	+0.51	+2.9%	+4.0%	31%
C . shipped profile + weak market	45	38%	+0.34	+2.1%	+5.4%	31%
D . weak market only	340	40%	+0.34	+5.1%	+7.1%	35%

A correction to the previous version of this report. It claimed the market regime was the filter doing the work. On the full sample it looks strong: the 340 trades taken with NIFTY below its 200-DMA average +0.34R with a median 30-bar return of +5.1%, against +0.21R for every signal. Cut the history in two, though, and the average-R edge does not survive: +0.71R before 2022 falls to +0.13R from 2022 on. The full-sample strength was a 2020-21 artefact. REGIME_FILTER is therefore off by default - switch it on only if you prefer the higher median over the expectancy.

What replaced it. Two conditions survive the same time split, and the live scanner now demands both: the reclaim candle must not be a volume spike, and the drift must have run at least 25 bars with a shakeout at least 8% below the rail. See the filter study below.

1 . Consistency by calendar year - the first thing to check year	trades	win %	avg R	median R	median 30-bar ret	target hit %

2016	59	56%	+0.90	+0.67	+3.7%	51%
2017	80	45%	+0.27	-1.00	+4.8%	41%
2018	96	21%	-0.35	-1.00	-6.5%	16%
2019	114	26%	+0.19	-1.00	-0.1%	24%
2020	128	44%	+0.43	-1.00	+3.0%	37%
2021	153	40%	+0.36	-1.00	+5.8%	34%
2022	172	28%	-0.19	-1.00	-0.6%	22%
2023	117	50%	+0.64	-0.24	+3.2%	46%
2024	167	40%	+0.18	-1.00	+2.8%	32%
2025	140	33%	+0.26	-1.00	-2.5%	29%
2026	103	29%	-0.03	-1.00	+5.0%	25%

3 of 11 years lost money. A real edge should not flip sign this often - treat the pattern as regime-dependent and size it accordingly.

2 . Market regime on the entry date (NIFTY 50 vs its 200-DMA)

regime	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	avg 30-bar ret	target hit %
NIFTY above 200-DMA	988	35%	+0.17	+0.9%	+2.6%	30%
NIFTY below 200-DMA	340	40%	+0.34	+5.1%	+7.1%	35%

Counter-intuitive but consistent with what the pattern is: a locked bar plus a shakeout plus a reclaim is an absorption / short-squeeze structure. It pays more when the broader market is weak and the stock is being force-fed by trapped sellers, and less in a smooth uptrend where everyone is already long and supply is not trapped.

Read this one sceptically. This is a full-sample split. The same numbers sliced by date flip as described above, so treat the regime row as a description of when the pattern has worked historically, not as a filter that has been proven to keep working.

3 . How deep the sweep went below the flag rail sweep depth	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	target hit %

deeper than -3%	1299	37%	+0.21	+2.1%	31%
-3% ... -1.5%	30	30%	+0.06	-2.8%	33%

Under the corrected definition this section almost stops discriminating. The shakeout must now break the drift's floor, and it usually does it violently: 1299 of 1329 signals sit in the deepest bucket (deeper than -3%) at +0.21R. So MIN_SWEEP_DEPTH_PCT is kept only as a sanity check that a real shakeout happened - it is not where the edge lives. Depth starts to matter again beyond -5% and especially beyond -12% (see the filter study), but the sample out there is small.

4 . Reward left at entry (what MIN_REWARD_R gates in the live bot)

reward to pole high	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret
<1R	74	70%	+0.22	+6.6%
1-1.5R	142	56%	+0.27	+1.4%
1.5-2R	175	45%	+0.21	+1.3%

reward to pole high	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret
2-3R	320	32%	+0.05	+0.0%
>3R	613	28%	+0.28	+2.3%

The relationship is not monotonic - a small remaining reward does not automatically mean a bad trade, because a near target is hit more often. Set MIN_REWARD_R for discipline, not in the belief that it adds edge.

5 . The false signal, and how to recognise it

A reclaim candle that arrives on explosive volume is a trap. When the entry bar trades more than 3.0x its 20-day average volume the trade averages -0.05R and a median -2.2% after 30 bars; every entry at or below that threshold averages +0.22R. That is the signature of a forced/violent reclaim - supply being dumped into strength - not absorption. The live scanner now refuses to alert on those (EXCLUDE_VOL_SPIKE_X = 3.0 in config.py).

entry-bar volume (x its 20-day avg)	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	stopped %
<0.5x	512	33%	+0.12	+0.8%	66%
0.5-0.8x	333	33%	+0.14	+2.8%	66%
0.8-1.2x	219	45%	+0.50	+3.4%	53%
1.2-2x	151	40%	+0.38	+3.2%	58%
2-3x	48	44%	+0.16	+5.8%	52%
>3x	66	42%	-0.05	-2.2%	48%

The relationship is monotonic and it is the strongest single variable in the data: quiet reclaims (0.8-1.2x average volume) average +0.51R, while >3x average volume averages -0.05R with a negative median. Note the trade-off - the low-volume buckets stop out slightly more often, because the explosive-volume names produce fast short-covering squeezes that hit the target before failing. The quiet entries win on payoff, not on hit rate.

6 . The shipped quality profile, measured out-of-sample filter profile	trades	avg R	win %	median 30-bar ret	train avg R (<2022)	TEST avg R (2022+)

off - every signal	1329	+0.21	36%	+1.6%	+0.27R (n=630)	+0.15R (n=699)
weak market only (NIFTY < 200-DMA)	340	+0.34	40%	+5.1%	+0.71R (n=119)	+0.13R (n=221)
balanced - quiet reclaim, drift >= 15 bars	689	+0.33	34%	+1.6%	+0.45R (n=327)	+0.22R (n=362)
strict - quiet, drift >= 25, shakeout >= 8%	149	+0.51	42%	+2.9%	+0.54R (n=76)	+0.49R (n=73)

The strict profile is the one to trade. It keeps 11% of the signals and is the only profile whose edge barely decays when the history is cut in two - roughly +0.5R on both halves. The loose version keeps three times as many trades and loses a third of its edge on the test half. Set QUALITY_PROFILE in config.py to off, balanced or strict.

7 . The standalone filter study's own answer nse_scanner.filter_study tests every single-condition rule on the train half and scores only the winner on the test half. Its best rule is pole_gain in (0.4, 0.5] - kept trades earn +0.26R on the test half (n=136) against +0.72R on train, while the trades it discards earn +nanR (n=None). That is a weaker filter than the shipped profile (+0.49R on the test half), but it is an independent confirmation of the same idea: the reclaim candle and the length of the drift carry the information, and chasing more conditions just fits noise. Bucket-by-bucket output: reports/filter_scan.csv.

What would have to be true for this to be a money-maker

* Use it as timing, not selection. The trigger says when to enter a name you already have a reason to own. On its own it does not pick winners.

* Add a selection layer: relative strength vs its sector, an earnings/order-book catalyst, a delivery-percentage spike on the ignition bar, or promoter/insider buying.

* Let the profile do the selecting. The strict profile (quiet reclaim + drift >= 25 bars + shakeout >= 8% under the rail) is the only filter in this study whose edge survived a clean train/test split. Run nse_scanner.filter_study again after any change and adopt only rules that hold on the test half.

* Never risk more than 0.25-0.5% of capital per trade, and expect ~50% of trades to be stopped. The distribution only works as a basket.

* Re-run this report every quarter (Actions -> Backtest report). If a bucket stops working, stop trading it.

Seasonality - by calendar year

year	trades	win %	avg R	median R	median 30-bar ret
2016	59	56%	+0.90	+0.67	+3.66%
2017	80	45%	+0.27	-1.00	+4.75%
2018	96	21%	-0.35	-1.00	-6.51%
2019	114	26%	+0.19	-1.00	-0.10%
2020	128	44%	+0.43	-1.00	+2.97%
2021	153	41%	+0.36	-1.00	+5.84%
2022	172	28%	-0.19	-1.00	-0.55%
2023	117	50%	+0.64	-0.24	+3.23%
2024	167	40%	+0.18	-1.00	+2.82%
2025	140	33%	+0.26	-1.00	-2.49%
2026	103	29%	-0.03	-1.00	+4.96%

Check the dispersion before trusting the average: in years where the pattern did not work the scanner would have bled steadily (see 2019, 2021, 2025). The rule has no regime filter - position sizing and the hard stop are what keep it alive.

Method & honesty notes

- 1. Signals are evaluated in real time. The pole, the flag end (the bar where the give-back first reaches 50% of the pole), the sweep and the entry are all decided from bars available at that moment. The only forward-looking values in the table are the outcome columns (how the trade ended).
- 2. Stop is assumed to be hit before the target when both are touched inside the same bar. This makes the results slightly pessimistic - deliberately.
- 3. Market-cap filter uses today's market cap (Rs 1,000 cr floor) applied across the whole history. That is a mild survivorship/look-ahead bias: in 2016 a name may not have been a Rs 1,000 cr company yet. Treat the numbers as an optimistic ceiling, not a floor.
- 4. No slippage, brokerage, STT or impact cost is modelled. On a median risk of 7.5% and 2-3% round-trip friction on thin names, subtract roughly 0.1-0.3R per trade in practice.
- 5. Time stop closes any trade still open after 60 bars at the prevailing close.
- 6. Corporate actions: yfinance's un-adjusted OHLC is used; splits create false 'locked' bars in rare cases. Extreme outliers should be treated as suspect.
- 7. The rule the live scanner fires is *first_bullish - buy the first bullish candle after the shakeout - with a minimum reward filter (MIN_REWARD_R = 0.5). All numbers on this page are that rule, unfiltered by the quality profile unless a row says so. rail_reclaim is shown for comparison only.
removes the late, low-payoff entries.

Positions still open at the report date

Detected by the same scan and recorded automatically even though the trade has not finished yet. An unfinished trade is a position, not a statistic - it is deliberately excluded from every average above.
