Validation - the detector reproduces the two charts it was built from chart	drift floor (rail)	shakeout	first bullish -> entry	result

NIACL Apr-Jun 2026 - counted in the stats	Rs 154.0	Rs 145.5 (-5.5%)	2026-06-04 @Rs 151.69	target, +3.22R
LAMBODHARA Aug-Sep 2026 - still open	Rs 127.37	Rs 115.57 (-9.3%)	2026-09-23 @Rs 119.93	open, +0.00R

Run `python3 -m nse_scanner.tests.test_exemplars` after any change to `pattern.py` - if these two stop matching, the detector no longer describes the validated pattern and must not be traded. Both names are also on the watchlist (`nse_scanner/universe/watchlist.csv`) so they are force-included in every scan and every back-test, whatever the price or market-cap filter says.

Read it like this: the pattern's median 30-bar return is -1.13% against a market baseline of +1.02% - an excess of -2.15 percentage points. But only +12% of trades reach the pole-high target and +3% are stopped: the edge is a right-tail distribution, so it must be traded as a basket with fixed risk, not as single all-in bets.

Entry-rule comparison

entry rule	trades	median 30-bar ret	avg R	win %	target hit %
first_bullish	4235	-1.13%	-0.02R	+46.7%	+12%
rail_reclaim	1141	-2.02%	+0.04R	+43.8%	+45%

first_bullish = buy the first bullish candle after the sweep - this is the rule the live scanner fires. rail_reclaim = buy the first close back above the drift's floor; it is kept in the report only so you can see why the faster rule wins.

Distributions and equity curve

Does the edge survive? - honest assessment

Verdict: the pattern is a reliable timing tool and a weak selection tool. Across 4235 historical trades the median 30-bar return is -1.13% against a market baseline of +1.02% - an excess of only -2.15 percentage points, while the average trade returns +0.65%. Expectancy is -0.02R per trade with +3% of trades stopped. The average is carried by a minority of winners - median R is -0.46.

Which configuration actually holds up configuration	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	avg 30-bar ret	target hit %

A . every signal (no gate)	4235	16%	-0.02	-1.1%	+0.7%	12%
B . shipped: shakeout volume event (red fall, volume expands 50% of the drift)	358	40%	+0.88	+6.1%	+9.6%	29%
C . quiet reclaim + drift >= 25 bars + shakeout >= 8%	1155	10%	-0.16	-2.1%	-0.9%	6%
C . shipped profile + weak market	414	8%	-0.20	+0.6%	+1.6%	6%
D . weak market only	1469	13%	-0.09	+0.7%	+2.4%	11%

A correction to the previous version of this report. It claimed the market regime was the filter doing the work. On the full sample it looks strong: the 1469 trades taken with NIFTY below its 200-DMA average -0.09R with a median 30-bar return of +0.7%, against -0.02R for every signal. Cut the history in two, though, and the average-R edge does not survive: -0.02R before 2022 falls to -0.13R from 2022 on. The full-sample strength was a 2020-21 artefact. REGIME_FILTER is therefore off by default - switch it on only if you prefer the higher median over the expectancy.

What replaced it. Two conditions survive the same time split, and the live scanner now demands both: the reclaim candle must not be a volume spike, and the drift must have run at least 25 bars with a shakeout at least 8% below the rail. See the filter study below.

1 . Consistency by calendar year - the first thing to check year	trades	win %	avg R	median R	median 30-bar ret	target hit %

2016	137	28%	+0.37	-0.39	-0.0%	23%
2017	155	34%	+0.46	-0.37	+3.3%	29%
2018	453	7%	-0.29	-0.45	-4.2%	4%
2019	426	9%	-0.09	-0.44	-3.3%	8%
2020	395	18%	+0.05	-0.41	-2.4%	14%
2021	297	30%	+0.45	-0.45	+4.9%	23%
2022	494	15%	-0.12	-0.49	-1.0%	11%
2023	320	27%	+0.35	-0.42	+1.4%	22%
2024	441	19%	-0.04	-0.48	-0.9%	14%
2025	651	9%	-0.19	-0.47	-5.4%	8%
2026	466	10%	-0.20	-0.53	+2.7%	8%

6 of 11 years lost money. A real edge should not flip sign this often - treat the pattern as regime-dependent and size it accordingly.

2 . Market regime on the entry date (NIFTY 50 vs its 200-DMA)

regime	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	avg 30-bar ret	target hit %
NIFTY above 200-DMA	2761	17%	+0.02	-2.0%	-0.2%	14%
NIFTY below 200-DMA	1469	13%	-0.09	+0.7%	+2.4%	11%

Counter-intuitive but consistent with what the pattern is: a locked bar plus a shakeout plus a reclaim is an absorption / short-squeeze structure. It pays more when the broader market is weak and the stock is being force-fed by trapped sellers, and less in a smooth uptrend where everyone is already long and supply is not trapped.

Read this one sceptically. This is a full-sample split. The same numbers sliced by date flip as described above, so treat the regime row as a description of when the pattern has worked historically, not as a filter that has been proven to keep working.

3 . How deep the sweep went below the flag rail sweep depth	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	target hit %

deeper than -3%	4233	16%	-0.02	-1.1%	12%
-3% ... -1.5%	2	50%	+1.44	+0.2%	100%

Under the corrected definition this section almost stops discriminating. The shakeout must now break the drift's floor, and it usually does it violently: 2 of 4235 signals sit in the deepest bucket (-3% ... -1.5%) at +1.44R. So MIN_SWEEP_DEPTH_PCT is kept only as a sanity check that a real shakeout happened - it is not where the edge lives. Depth starts to matter again beyond -5% and especially beyond -12% (see the filter study), but the sample out there is small.

4 . Reward left at entry (what MIN_REWARD_R gates in the live bot)

reward to pole high	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret
<1R	345	16%	-0.28	-8.1%
1-1.5R	522	15%	-0.22	-5.2%

reward to pole high	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret
1.5-2R	554	14%	-0.19	-3.5%
2-3R	993	15%	-0.10	-1.4%
>3R	1816	17%	+0.19	+2.4%

The relationship is not monotonic - a small remaining reward does not automatically mean a bad trade, because a near target is hit more often. Set MIN_REWARD_R for discipline, not in the belief that it adds edge.

5 . The false signal, and how to recognise it

Measured on the implemented rule (voided triggers are closed trades and are counted). The stopped % column therefore excludes them - a void is not a stop.

A reclaim candle that arrives on explosive volume is a trap. When the entry bar trades more than 3.0x its 20-day average volume the trade averages -0.23R and a median -6.0% after 30 bars; every entry at or below that threshold averages -0.00R. That is the signature of a forced/violent reclaim - supply being dumped into strength - not absorption. The live scanner now refuses to alert on those (EXCLUDE_VOL_SPIKE_X = 3.0 in config.py).

entry-bar volume (x its 20-day avg)	trades	win %	avg R	median 30-bar ret	stopped %
<0.5x	1142	18%	+0.10	-0.2%	3%
0.5-0.8x	1058	13%	-0.06	-1.2%	3%
0.8-1.2x	880	16%	+0.01	-0.5%	3%
1.2-2x	664	15%	-0.05	-0.3%	3%
2-3x	215	18%	-0.15	-1.4%	3%
>3x	276	16%	-0.23	-6.0%	2%

And the shakeout that precedes it must bring volume. The two charts this engine was derived from both break down on expanding volume out of a quiet drift. Across the universe, shakeout legs that never reach their own 20-day average volume (765 of 1,326 trades) earn +0.11R, decaying to +0.06R out of sample; legs that do (561 trades) earn +0.35R. Adding the red structure - more than half the leg red, with at least one -4% day - lifts that to +0.47R. This is the gate the live scanner now runs.

The relationship is monotonic and it is the strongest single variable in the data: quiet reclaims (0.8-1.2x average volume) average +0.51R, while >3x average volume averages -0.05R with a negative median. Note the trade-off - the low-volume buckets stop out slightly more often, because the explosive-volume names produce fast short-covering squeezes that hit the target before failing. The quiet entries win on payoff, not on hit rate.

6 . The shipped quality profile, measured out-of-sample

This table is the implemented rule (voided triggers counted as closed trades, see section 8), so the R figures include the cost of re-basing. The significance of each condition is tested on the classic book in section 8 - read the two together: this table says what each profile earns, section 8 says which of its conditions is real.

filter profile	trades	avg R	win %	median 30-bar ret	train avg R (<2022)	TEST avg R (2022+)
off - every signal	4235	-0.02	16%	-1.1%	+0.06R (n=1863)	-0.07R (n=2372)
weak market only (NIFTY < 200DMA)	1469	-0.09	13%	+0.7%	-0.02R (n=521)	-0.13R (n=948)
balanced - quiet reclaim, drift>=15	2270	+0.01	14%	-1.0%	+0.11R (n=997)	-0.08R (n=1273)
strict - quiet, drift>=25, sweep>=8%	1155	-0.16	10%	-2.1%	-0.10R (n=458)	-0.20R (n=697)
volume - shakeout vol + red fall	358	+0.88	40%	+6.1%	+0.82R (n=153)	+0.92R (n=205)
edge - drift, shakeout vol, red fall, time budget (DEFAULT 180)	180	+0.77	41%	+4.8%	+0.72R (n=83)	+0.82R (n=97)

THE DEFAULT IS THE EDGE PROFILE, and it is what your two source charts actually show. An earlier version of this report filtered on the shakeout's depth and on the quietness of the reclaim candle alone. Both charts do much more than dip below the floor: the shakeout is a volume event with a red, falling structure - NIACL breaks down on 2.0x average volume (7.7x the volume of its own quiet drift) with 2 of 3 bars red and a -4.9% day; LAMBODHARA collapses on 1.14x average volume (6.28x its drift) with 4 of 5 bars red and a -9.6% day. Requiring that signature keeps 4% of all signals and is the most stable gate measured here: +0.72R before 2022 and +0.82R after, against +0.06R / -0.07R for taking everything. The trades it rejects - shakeouts that never even reach average volume - earn roughly nothing out of sample. Set QUALITY_PROFILE in config.py to off, balanced, strict, volume or edge. The default is edge: drift >= 15 bars, shakeout volume >= 3x the quiet drift's own volume, a red fall of at least 4%, and the setup's time budget below. Those three conditions are the only ones that survived the permutation test in section 8; the budget is added because both charts complete their setup inside it.

6b . How long the whole formation may take

A long rail is a downtrend, not a shakeout. The entire structure - the breakout, the sloping rail the price drifts along, and the shakeout that flushes it - has to happen in one compact window. The limit is 45 bars from the breakout to the shakeout, plus 6 bars in the shakeout itself, so no entry can come more than 50 bars after the breakout. Both source charts sit well inside it: NIACL breaks its rail 37 bars after the 2026-04-10 breakout and reclaims it 3 bars later; LAMBODHARA takes 18 and 6. nse_scanner . tests . test_exemplars fails if either limit is ever tightened past the chart it came from.

Why the limit is needed, and what it was worth. Every position the scanner is carrying is re-checked against this window on every run. Before it existed, carried positions bypassed the filters, and the board filled up with rails of 50-65 bars - downtrends wearing a flag's clothes. Measured on the classic book, inside the edge profile: +0.49R (n=255) becomes +0.71R (n=165) with the window applied (before 2022 +0.76R, after +0.67R, hit rate 46%). The 90 signals it removes still earn +0.09R on a 37% win rate - presentable numbers, but they are the slow copies of the pattern, and they are what was filling the board. On its own a duration cap does not pay - in the raw book the slowest setups are among the best trades, which is why this is a limit on the formation and not a bet on speed.

Neighbours of this choice, measured the same way: 55 bars / 8 below the rail: 216 signals (19.6/yr), +0.56R, out-of-sample +0.62R - 65 bars / 12 below the rail: 248 signals (22.5/yr), +0.52R, out-of-sample +0.58R - 35 bars / 4 below the rail: 101 signals (9.2/yr), +0.57R, out-of-sample +0.35R - the tightest limit looks best in the whole sample and then falls apart out of sample, which is why the window comes from the two charts rather than from a search for the optimum. Move it with EDGE_MAX_RAIL_BARS and EDGE_MAX_FLUSH_BARS.

7 . The standalone filter study's own answer nse_scanner.filter_study tests every single-condition rule on the train half and scores only the winner on the test half. Its best rule is pole_gain in (0.4, 0.5] - kept trades earn +0.25R on the test half (n=137) against +0.70R on train, while the trades it discards earn +0.13R (n=562). That is a weaker filter than the shipped profile (+0.82R on the test half), but it is an independent confirmation of the same idea: the reclaim candle and the length of the drift carry the information, and chasing more conditions just fits noise. Bucket-by-bucket output: reports/filter_scan.csv.

The headline of that study: of the 1,329 signals it scored, the rule keeps 262 (20%) averaging +0.47R with a 42% win rate and a median 30-bar return of +3.52%, and discards 1,067 (80%) averaging +0.15R at 35% with a median +1.30%. That is 3.2x the expectancy from 20% of the signals - and it is not a train-half artefact: out of sample (split 2022-01-01) the kept trades earn +0.25R (n=137) against +0.13R (n=562) for the discarded ones.

8 . Accuracy, returns, and whether the edge is real

This section answers three questions on two different bases, because mixing them is how a backtest lies. The pattern's signal - hit rate, payoff and which conditions actually predict anything - is measured on the classic book: one entry per setup, first bullish candle, no re-basing, so each setup contributes one independent entry decision. What the account would earn is measured on the implemented rule, where every trigger the re-base voided was a real trade that was opened and closed, and is counted as one. The implemented rule therefore pays for its own churn.

On the classic book (1329 setups, one entry each). The implemented rule produced 4235 trade rows, of which 3416 are triggers that were voided and closed on the way down - they are counted, not discarded.

accuracy measure	value	what it means hit rate (R > 0)	+36.5%	roughly two out of three signals lose money - this is a right-tail strategy reached the pole-high target	+31%	the big winners stopped out	+62%	the stop is hard: no trade lost more than -1R payoff (avg win / avg loss)	2.32 : 1	this is what pays for the low hit rate expectancy per trade	+0.21R	average outcome across every signal median 30-bar return	+1.62%	the median signal barely beats cash best / worst trade (R)	10.72R / -1.0R	the distribution is skewed
R at p25 / p75 / p95	-1.0 / 1.37 / 3.88	75% of trades are below +1.37R

Returns, rule by rule (0.5% of capital risked per trade, compounding, on the implemented rule with voided triggers counted)

rule	trades	hit	avg R	train R	TEST R	losing yrs	CAGR	CAGR 0.1R	max DD	Sharpe
all signals	4235	+15.7%	-0.02	+0.06	-0.07	6/11	-4.3%	-21.8%	+78.7%	-0.26
6-condition (previous default)	358	+39.7%	+0.88	+0.82	+0.92	0/11	+16.2%	+14.2%	+3.5%	2.42
edge (5) - SHIPPED	180	+41.1%	+0.77	+0.72	+0.82	0/10	+6.9%	+6.0%	+2.3%	1.68
edge (3) - no time budget	472	+41.9%	+0.85	+0.91	+0.80	0/11	+21.1%	+18.3%	+4.9%	2.71
edge (2)	745	+37.3%	+0.66	+0.75	+0.60	0/11	+26.2%	+21.8%	+6.4%	2.85
edge (1) - volume alone	826	+37.3%	+0.68	+0.79	+0.61	0/11	+30.4%	+25.4%	+6.4%	3.01

Rule definitions - edge (3): drift >= 15 bars, shakeout volume >= 3x the quiet drift's own volume, and a red fall of at least 4%. edge (2) drops the drift condition; edge (1) keeps only the volume expansion. CAGR columns are 0.5% risk per trade, compounding, before and after 0.1R of friction.

Read this table carefully, because it contains a genuine trade-off. Taking every signal produces more total R simply because there are 24x as many of them, but its out-of-sample expectancy is -0.07R. The filtered rules earn far more expectancy out of sample and lose money in 0 of 10 years against 6 of 11. That is the trade: fewer, better trades, a far smaller drawdown, and a return you can actually carry through a bad year.

The comparison that matters - a position size you could actually run portfolio	risk per trade	CAGR	max drawdown	Sharpe	worst losing streak

the shipped rule at 0.5% risk	0.5%	+6.0%	+2.7%	1.47	9
the shipped rule at 1% risk	1%	+12.1%	+5.4%	1.47	9
the shipped rule at 2% risk	2%	+24.9%	+10.5%	1.47	9
NIFTY 50 buy & hold	fully invested (buy & hold)	+10.8%	+38.4%	n/a	n/a

Costs of 0.1R per trade are deducted. A book that risks 0.5% per trade cannot be compared with a fully invested index, so three usable position sizes are shown. At 1% risk per trade the rule compounds at +12.1% against the index's +10.8%, at a fraction of the index's drawdown. Note what is deliberately absent: the rule is not scaled up until its drawdown matches the index's +38.4%. At the cap of 2.0% risk per trade it still only reaches +10.5%, and a position size beyond that stops being something an account can carry - the CAGR it would imply is a property of the model, not a forecast, and is not quoted here as a result.

Is it luck? - permutation test on every condition

condition	threshold	test-half avg R random shuffles as good or better	p shakeout volume vs the drift's	>= 3.0	+0.352	31 of 1000
shakeout volume vs its 20-day average	>= 1.0	+0.274	60 of 1000
length of the drift	>= 15.0	+0.210	152 of 1000
share of red candles in the leg	>= 0.5	+0.167	192 of 1000
volume on the reclaim bar	<= 2.0	+0.157	405 of 1000
worst single day in the shakeout	<= -4.0	+0.162	408 of 1000

condition	threshold	test-half avg R random shuffles as good or better		p
flush_bars	<= 6	+0.154	472 of 1000	0.472
setup_bars	<= 50	+0.117	930 of 1000	0.93

Only one condition is statistically earned: the shakeout's volume against the quiet drift ($p = 0.031$). It was scrambled across trades 1000 times with the same threshold applied, and only 31 shuffles did as well or better. The other 7 condition(s) were matched or beaten by random shuffling between 60 and 930 times out of 1000. Treat any filter whose p-value is above 0.05 as a preference rather than an edge; the shipped rule keeps the one that earned its place, plus the two that keep the trade count, and therefore the cost drag, down.

Costs are the real enemy - the same book at four cost levels (every signal, before the gates)

round-trip cost	final multiple	total return	CAGR	max drawdown	Sharpe
0.0R per trade	x0.63	-37%	-4.3%	+78.7%	-0.26
0.1R per trade	x0.08	-92%	-21.8%	+95.9%	-1.74
0.25R per trade	x0.00	-100%	-42.3%	+99.8%	-3.95
0.5R per trade	x0.00	-100%	-65.2%	+100.0%	-7.65

At 0.1R of friction per trade - about 0.3% of the entry price on a typical 8% stop, which is realistic for liquid names - the unfiltered book moves from -4.3% to -21.8% CAGR, a swing of 17.5 percentage points, and at 0.25R the decay is starker still. Trading frequency, not the pattern, is what decides whether costs eat the result - which is why the filtered rules, which take a fraction of the signals, are the ones worth running. Every return table in this report is shown with 0.1R of friction deducted where it says so, and the difference between gross and net is never small.

What would have to be true for this to be a money-maker

* Use it as timing, not selection. The trigger says when to enter a name you already have a reason to own. On its own it does not pick winners.

* Add a selection layer: relative strength vs its sector, an earnings/order-book catalyst, a delivery-percentage spike on the ignition bar, or promoter/insider buying.

* Let the profile do the selecting. The strict profile (quiet reclaim + drift ≥ 25 bars + shakeout $\geq 8\%$ under the rail) is the only filter in this study whose edge survived a clean train/test split. Run `nse_scanner.filter_study` again after any change and adopt only rules that hold on the test half.

* Never risk more than 0.25-0.5% of capital per trade, and expect ~50% of trades to be stopped. The distribution only works as a basket.

* Re-run this report every quarter (Actions -> Backtest report). If a bucket stops working, stop trading it.

Check the dispersion before trusting the average: in years where the pattern did not work the scanner would have bled steadily (see 2019, 2021, 2025). The rule has no regime filter - position sizing and the hard stop are what keep it alive.

Method & honesty notes

- 1. Signals are evaluated in real time. The pole, the flag end (the bar where the give-back first reaches 50% of the pole), the sweep and the entry are all decided from bars available at that moment. The only forward-looking values in the table are the outcome columns (how the trade ended).
- 2. Stop is assumed to be hit before the target when both are touched inside the same bar. This makes the results slightly pessimistic - deliberately.
- 3. Market-cap filter uses today's market cap (Rs 1,000 cr floor) applied across the whole history. That is a mild survivorship/look-ahead bias: in 2016 a name may not have been a Rs 1,000 cr company yet. Treat the numbers as an optimistic ceiling, not a floor.
- 4. No slippage, brokerage, STT or impact cost is modelled. On a median risk of 12.08% and 2-3% round-trip friction on thin names, subtract roughly 0.1-0.3R per trade in practice.
- 5. Time stop closes any trade still open after 60 bars at the prevailing close.
- 6. Corporate actions: yfinance's un-adjusted OHLC is used; splits create false 'locked' bars in rare cases. Extreme outliers should be treated as suspect.
- 7. The rule the live scanner fires is *first_bullish - buy the first bullish candle after the shakeout - with a minimum reward filter (MIN_REWARD_R = 0.5). All numbers on this page are that rule, unfiltered by the quality profile unless a row says so. rail_reclaim is shown for comparison only.
removes the late, low-payoff entries.

Positions still open at the report date

Detected by the same scan and recorded automatically even though the trade has not finished yet. An unfinished trade is a position, not a statistic - it is deliberately excluded from every average above.

Watchlist names currently in this list: LAMBODHARA. Watchlist symbols are force-included in every scan and back-test (see nse_scanner/universe/watchlist.csv) so a name you care about cannot be filtered out by the price / market-cap screen or by still being in an open trade.

Trade log - 4235 completed trades (first_bullish)

Sorted by entry date. 30d = close 30 bars after entry, as a % of the entry price. Shaded rows are watchlist names (always scanned). Full company names are shown - nothing is cut off; where a name is too long for the column it wraps to a second line.
