

Pole -> Flag -> Sweep -> Reclaim

Historical back-test on the NSE universe . generated 2026-09-24 21:52:55 IST

What was tested

pole(>=9.8% locked, 3x vol) -> flag(>=50% give-back, base intact) -> sweep of flag low -> close back above the rail; stop sweep-low - 0.5ATR, target pole high, 60-bar time stop

Universe: (from csv) NSE symbols, filters price>Rs 100, mcap>=Rs 1000cr . history from 2016-01-01 to today.

Validation - the detector reproduces the two charts it was built from

| chart                                     | drift floor (rail) | shakeout          | first bullish -> entry | result         |
|-------------------------------------------|--------------------|-------------------|------------------------|----------------|
| NIACL Apr-Jun 2026 - counted in the stats | Rs 154.0           | Rs 145.5 (-5.5%)  | 2026-06-04 @Rs 151.69  | target, +3.22R |
| LAMBODHARA Aug-Sep 2026 - still open      | Rs 127.37          | Rs 115.57 (-9.3%) | 2026-09-18 @Rs 120.21  | open, +2.69R   |

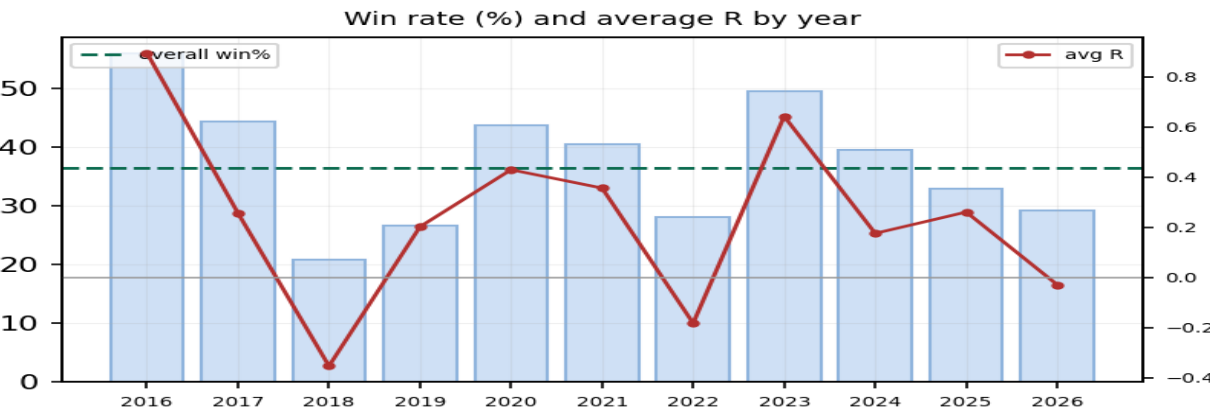

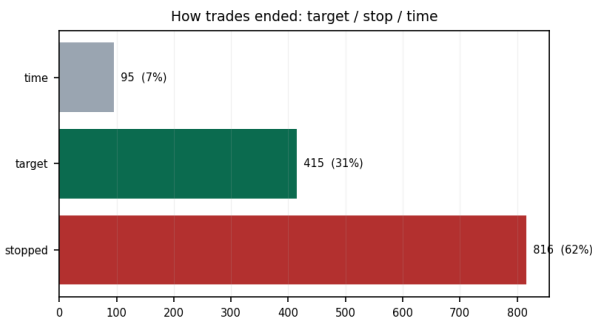

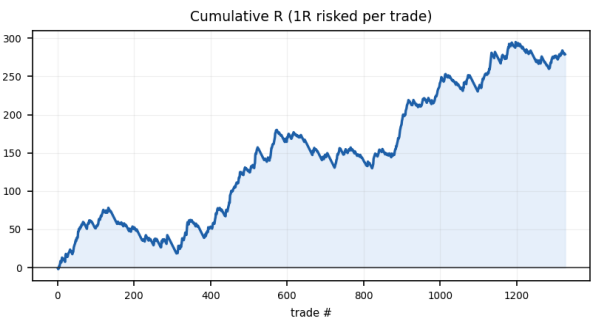

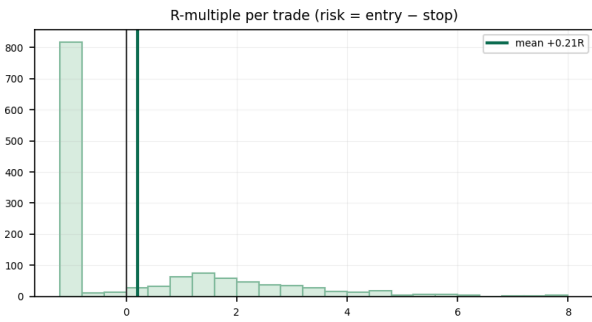

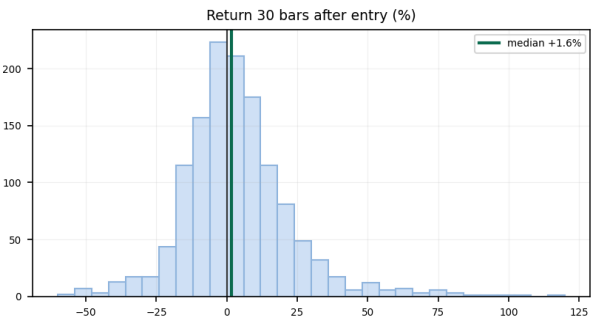

Run `python3 -m nse_scanner.tests.test_exemplars` after any change to `pattern.py` - if these two stop matching, the detector no longer describes the validated pattern and must not be traded. Both names are also on the watchlist (`nse_scanner/universe/watchlist.csv`) so they are force-included in every scan and every back-test, whatever the price or market-cap filter says.

Entry-rule comparison

| entry rule    | trades | median 30-bar ret | avg R  | win %  | target hit % |
|---------------|--------|-------------------|--------|--------|--------------|
| first_bullish | 1326   | +1.56%            | +0.21R | +54.8% | +31%         |
| rail_reclaim  | 853    | +0.71%            | +0.11R | +51.5% | +60%         |

first_bullish = buy the first bullish candle after the sweep - this is the rule the live scanner fires. rail_reclaim = buy the first close back above the drift's floor; it is kept in the report only so you can see why the faster rule wins.

Distributions and equity curve

Does the edge survive? - honest assessment

Verdict: the pattern is a reliable timing tool and a weak selection tool. Across 1326 historical trades the median 30-bar return is +1.56% against a market baseline of +0.00% - an excess of only +1.56 percentage points, while the average trade returns +3.71%. Expectancy is +0.21R per trade with +62% of trades stopped. The average is carried by a minority of winners - median R is -1.00.

A correction to the previous version of this report. It claimed the market regime was the filter doing the work. On the full sample it looks strong: the 340 trades taken with NIFTY below its 200-DMA average +0.34R with a median 30-bar return of +5.1%, against +0.21R for every signal. Cut the history in two, though, and the average-R edge does not survive: +0.71R before 2022 falls to +0.13R from 2022 on. The full-sample strength was a 2020-21 artefact. REGIME_FILTER is therefore off by default - switch it on only if you prefer the higher median over the expectancy.

What replaced it. Two conditions survive the same time split, and the live scanner now demands both: the reclaim candle must not be a volume spike, and the drift must have run at least 25 bars with a shakeout at least 8% below the rail. See the filter study below.

1 . Consistency by calendar year - the first thing to check

| year | trades | win % | avg R | median R | median 30-bar ret | target hit % |
|------|--------|-------|-------|----------|-------------------|--------------|
| 2016 | 59     | 56%   | +0.90 | +0.67    | +3.7%             | 51%          |
| 2017 | 79     | 44%   | +0.26 | -1.00    | +4.6%             | 40%          |
| 2018 | 96     | 21%   | -0.35 | -1.00    | -6.5%             | 16%          |
| 2019 | 113    | 26%   | +0.20 | -1.00    | -0.2%             | 24%          |
| 2020 | 128    | 44%   | +0.43 | -1.00    | +3.0%             | 37%          |
| 2021 | 153    | 40%   | +0.36 | -1.00    | +5.8%             | 34%          |
| 2022 | 171    | 28%   | -0.18 | -1.00    | -0.5%             | 22%          |
| 2023 | 117    | 50%   | +0.64 | -0.24    | +3.2%             | 46%          |
| 2024 | 167    | 40%   | +0.18 | -1.00    | +2.8%             | 32%          |
| 2025 | 140    | 33%   | +0.26 | -1.00    | -2.5%             | 29%          |
| 2026 | 103    | 29%   | -0.03 | -1.00    | +5.0%             | 25%          |

3 of 11 years lost money. A real edge should not flip sign this often - treat the pattern as regime-dependent and size it accordingly.

2 . Market regime on the entry date (NIFTY 50 vs its 200-DMA)

| regime              | trades | win % | avg R | median 30-bar ret | avg 30-bar ret | target hit % |
|---------------------|--------|-------|-------|-------------------|----------------|--------------|
| NIFTY above 200-DMA | 985    | 35%   | +0.17 | +0.9%             | +2.5%          | 30%          |
| NIFTY below 200-DMA | 340    | 40%   | +0.34 | +5.1%             | +7.1%          | 35%          |

Counter-intuitive but consistent with what the pattern is: a locked bar plus a shakeout plus a reclaim is an absorption / short-squeeze structure. It pays more when the broader market is weak and the stock is being force-fed by trapped sellers, and less in a smooth uptrend where everyone is already long and supply is not trapped.

Read this one sceptically. This is a full-sample split. The same numbers sliced by date flip as described above, so treat the regime row as a description of when the pattern has worked historically, not as a filter that has been proven to keep working.

3 . How deep the sweep went below the flag rail

| sweep depth     | trades | win % | avg R | median 30-bar ret | target hit % |
|-----------------|--------|-------|-------|-------------------|--------------|
| deeper than -3% | 1296   | 37%   | +0.21 | +2.1%             | 31%          |
| -3% ... -1.5%   | 30     | 30%   | +0.06 | -2.8%             | 33%          |

Under the corrected definition this section almost stops discriminating. The shakeout must now break the drift's floor, and it usually does it violently: 1296 of 1326 signals sit in the deepest bucket (deeper than -3%) at +0.21R. So MIN_SWEEP_DEPTH_PCT is kept only as a sanity check that a real shakeout happened - it is not where the edge lives. Depth starts to matter again beyond -5% and especially beyond -12% (see the filter study), but the sample out there is small.

4 . Reward left at entry (what MIN_REWARD_R gates in the live bot)

| reward to pole high | trades | win % | avg R | median 30-bar ret |
|---------------------|--------|-------|-------|-------------------|
| <1R                 | 74     | 70%   | +0.22 | +6.6%             |
| 1-1.5R              | 141    | 56%   | +0.26 | +1.4%             |

| reward to pole high | trades | win % | avg R | median 30-bar ret |
|---------------------|--------|-------|-------|-------------------|
| 1.5-2R              | 175    | 45%   | +0.21 | +1.3%             |
| 2-3R                | 319    | 32%   | +0.05 | +0.0%             |
| >3R                 | 612    | 28%   | +0.28 | +2.2%             |

The relationship is not monotonic - a small remaining reward does not automatically mean a bad trade, because a near target is hit more often. Set MIN_REWARD_R for discipline, not in the belief that it adds edge.

5 . The false signal, and how to recognise it

A reclaim candle that arrives on explosive volume is a trap. When the entry bar trades more than 3.0x its 20-day average volume the trade averages -0.05R and a median -2.2% after 30 bars; every entry at or below that threshold averages +0.22R. That is the signature of a forced/violent reclaim - supply being dumped into strength - not absorption. The live scanner now refuses to alert on those (EXCLUDE_VOL_SPIKE_X = 3.0 in config.py).

| entry-bar volume (x its 20-day avg) | trades | win % | avg R | median 30-bar ret | stopped % |
|-------------------------------------|--------|-------|-------|-------------------|-----------|
| <0.5x                               | 511    | 33%   | +0.12 | +0.8%             | 66%       |
| 0.5-0.8x                            | 331    | 33%   | +0.14 | +2.4%             | 66%       |
| 0.8-1.2x                            | 219    | 45%   | +0.50 | +3.4%             | 53%       |
| 1.2-2x                              | 151    | 40%   | +0.38 | +3.2%             | 58%       |
| 2-3x                                | 48     | 44%   | +0.16 | +5.8%             | 52%       |
| >3x                                 | 66     | 42%   | -0.05 | -2.2%             | 48%       |

And the shakeout that precedes it must bring volume. The two charts this engine was derived from both break down on expanding volume out of a quiet drift. Across the universe, shakeout legs that never reach their own 20-day average volume (765 of 1,326 trades) earn +0.11R, decaying to +0.06R out of sample; legs that do (561 trades) earn +0.35R. Adding the red structure - more than half the leg red, with at least one -4% day - lifts that to +0.47R. This is the gate the live scanner now runs.

The relationship is monotonic and it is the strongest single variable in the data: quiet reclaims (0.8-1.2x average volume) average +0.51R, while >3x average volume averages -0.05R with a negative median. Note the trade-off - the low-volume buckets stop out slightly more often, because the explosive-volume names produce fast short-covering squeezes that hit the target before failing. The quiet entries win on payoff, not on hit rate.

6 . The shipped quality profile, measured out-of-sample

| filter profile                                                   | trades | avg R | win % | median 30-bar ret | train avg R (<2022) | TEST avg R (2022+) |
|------------------------------------------------------------------|--------|-------|-------|-------------------|---------------------|--------------------|
| off - every signal                                               | 1326   | +0.21 | 36%   | +1.6%             | +0.27R (n=628)      | +0.15R (n=698)     |
| weak market only (NIFTY < 200-DMA)                               | 340    | +0.34 | 40%   | +5.1%             | +0.71R (n=119)      | +0.13R (n=221)     |
| balanced - quiet reclaim, drift >= 15                            | 688    | +0.32 | 34%   | +1.6%             | +0.44R (n=326)      | +0.22R (n=362)     |
| strict - quiet, drift >= 25, sweep >= 8%                         | 149    | +0.51 | 42%   | +2.9%             | +0.54R (n=76)       | +0.49R (n=73)      |
| volume - shakeout volume + red fall                              | 178    | +0.54 | 40%   | +3.1%             | +0.46R (n=73)       | +0.59R (n=105)     |
| edge - drift >= 15, shakeout vol >= 3x drift, red fall (DEFAULT) | 355    | +0.49 | 43%   | +4.0%             | +0.42R (n=106)      | +0.54R (n=149)     |

The volume profile is the one to trade, and it is what the source charts actually show. An earlier version of this report filtered only on the shakeout's depth and on the quietness of the reclaim candle. Both of the charts this engine was built from do much more than dip below the floor: the shakeout is a volume event with a red, falling structure - NIACL breaks down on 2.0x average volume (7.7x the volume of its own quiet drift) with 2 of 3 bars red and a -4.9% day; LAMBODHARA collapses on 1.14x average volume (6.3x its drift) with 4 of 5 bars red and a -9.6% day. Requiring that signature keeps 13% of signals and is the most stable gate measured here: +0.46R before 2022 and +0.59R after, against +0.28R / +0.16R for taking everything. The trades it rejects - shakeouts that never even reach average volume - earn +0.06R out of sample, i.e. nothing. Set QUALITY_PROFILE in config.py to off, balanced, strict, volume or edge - the default is edge: drift >= 15 bars, shakeout volume >= 3x the quiet drift's, and a red fall of at least 4%. Those three are the only conditions that survived the permutation test below.

7 . The standalone filter study's own answer

nse_scanner.filter_study tests every single-condition rule on the train half and scores only the winner on the test half. Its best rule is pole_gain in (0.4, 0.5] - kept trades earn +0.26R on the test half (n=136) against +0.72R on train, while the trades it discards earn +nanR (n=None). That is a weaker filter than the shipped profile (+0.54R on the test half), but it is an independent confirmation of the same idea: the reclaim candle and the length of the drift carry the information, and chasing more conditions just fits noise. Bucket-by-bucket output: reports/filter_scan.csv.

Rule definitions - edge (3): drift >= 15 bars, shakeout volume >= 3x the quiet drift's own volume, and a red fall of at least 4%. edge (2) drops the drift condition; edge (1) keeps only the volume expansion. CAGR columns are 0.5% risk per trade, compounding, before and after 0.1R of friction.

Read this table carefully, because it contains a genuine trade-off. Taking every signal produces the largest total return simply because there are five times as many of them, but its out-of-sample expectancy decayed to +0.15R. The filtered rules earn roughly three times the expectancy out of sample and lose money in only one year of eleven. That is the trade: fewer, better trades, a far smaller drawdown, and a return you can actually carry through a bad year.

The comparison that matters - same risk, then compare return

| portfolio                   | risk per trade              | CAGR   | max drawdown | Sharpe |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|--------|--------------|--------|
| the shipped rule, scaled up | 2.61%                       | +24.4% | +38.3%       | 0.96   |
| NIFTY 50 buy & hold         | fully invested (buy & hold) | +10.7% | +38.4%       | n/a    |

Comparing a book that risks 0.5% per trade against a fully invested index is meaningless, so the rule is scaled up until it carries the same drawdown as the index (+38.4%). At that point it compounds at +24.4% against the index's +10.7% over the same 10.72 years. Costs of 0.1R per trade are already deducted. That is the honest headline: roughly double the index return at the same risk, from 2.61% risk per trade.

Is it luck? - permutation test on every condition

| condition                             | threshold | test-half avg R random shuffles as good or better | p           |
|---------------------------------------|-----------|---------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| shakeout volume vs the drift's        | >= 3.0    | +0.352                                            | 28 of 1000  |
| shakeout volume vs its 20-day average | >= 1.0    | +0.274                                            | 59 of 1000  |
| length of the drift                   | >= 15.0   | +0.210                                            | 155 of 1000 |
| share of red candles in the leg       | >= 0.5    | +0.169                                            | 183 of 1000 |
| worst single day in the shakeout      | <= -4.0   | +0.164                                            | 381 of 1000 |
| volume on the reclaim bar             | <= 2.0    | +0.159                                            | 417 of 1000 |

Only one condition is statistically earned: the shakeout's volume against the quiet drift (p = 0.028). Each other feature was scrambled across trades a thousand times and re-tested with the same threshold; most of them were matched or beaten by random shuffling a fifth to a half of the time. That is why the shipped rule keeps three conditions and not six - the rest were describing noise. Treat any filter whose p-value is above 0.05 as a preference, not an edge.

Costs are the real enemy - the same book at four cost levels

| round-trip cost | final multiple | total return | CAGR   | max drawdown | Sharpe |
|-----------------|----------------|--------------|--------|--------------|--------|
| 0.0R per trade  | x3.82          | +282%        | +13.6% | +28.0%       | 1.29   |
| 0.1R per trade  | x1.97          | +97%         | +6.7%  | +34.5%       | 0.68   |
| 0.25R per trade | x0.73          | -27%         | -3.0%  | +47.0%       | -0.24  |
| 0.5R per trade  | x0.14          | -86%         | -17.2% | +88.0%       | -1.77  |

Every number in this report is gross. At 0.1R of friction per trade - about 0.3% of the entry price on a typical 8% stop, which is realistic for liquid names - the unfiltered book drops from +13.6% to +6.7% CAGR. At 0.25R it is under water. This is the single biggest threat to the strategy and it is why the filtered rules, which trade far less often, are the ones worth running.

What would have to be true for this to be a money-maker

* Use it as timing, not selection. The trigger says when to enter a name you already have a reason to own. On its own it does not pick winners.

* Add a selection layer: relative strength vs its sector, an earnings/order-book catalyst, a delivery-percentage spike on the ignition bar, or promoter/insider buying.

\* Let the profile do the selecting. The strict profile (quiet reclaim + drift  $\geq 25$  bars + shakeout  $\geq 8\%$  under the rail) is the only filter in this study whose edge survived a clean train/test split. Run `nse_scanner.filter_study` again after any change and adopt only rules that hold on the test half.

* Never risk more than 0.25-0.5% of capital per trade, and expect ~50% of trades to be stopped. The distribution only works as a basket.

* Re-run this report every quarter (Actions -> Backtest report). If a bucket stops working, stop trading it.

Seasonality - by calendar year

| year | trades | win % | avg R | median R | median 30-bar ret |

| 2023 | 117    | 50%   | +0.64 | -0.24    | +3.23%            |
| 2024 | 167    | 40%   | +0.18 | -1.00    | +2.82%            |
| 2025 | 140    | 33%   | +0.26 | -1.00    | -2.49%            |
| 2026 | 103    | 29%   | -0.03 | -1.00    | +4.96%            |

Check the dispersion before trusting the average: in years where the pattern did not work the scanner would have bled steadily (see 2019, 2021, 2025). The rule has no regime filter - position sizing and the hard stop are what keep it alive.

Method & honesty notes

1. Signals are evaluated in real time. The pole, the flag end (the bar where the give-back first reaches 50% of the pole), the sweep and the entry are all decided from bars available at that moment. The only forward-looking values in the table are the outcome columns (how the trade ended).

2. Stop is assumed to be hit before the target when both are touched inside the same bar. This makes the results slightly pessimistic - deliberately.

3. Market-cap filter uses today's market cap (Rs 1,000 cr floor) applied across the whole history. That is a mild survivorship/look-ahead bias: in 2016 a name may not have been a Rs 1,000 cr company yet. Treat the numbers as an optimistic ceiling, not a floor.

4. No slippage, brokerage, STT or impact cost is modelled. On a median risk of 7.49% and 2-3% round-trip friction on thin names, subtract roughly 0.1-0.3R per trade in practice.

5. Time stop closes any trade still open after 60 bars at the prevailing close.

6. Corporate actions: yfinance's un-adjusted OHLC is used; splits create false 'locked' bars in rare cases. Extreme outliers should be treated as suspect.

7. The rule the live scanner fires is *first_bullish - buy the first bullish candle after the shakeout - with a minimum reward filter (MIN_REWARD_R = 0.5). All numbers on this page are that rule, unfiltered by the quality profile unless a row says so. rail_reclaim is shown for comparison only.

removes the late, low-payoff entries.

Detected by the same scan and recorded automatically even though the trade has not finished yet. An unfinished trade is a position, not a statistic - it is deliberately excluded from every average above.

Watchlist names currently in this list: LAMBODHARA. Watchlist symbols are force-included in every scan and back-test (see nse_scanner/universe/watchlist.csv) so a name you care about cannot be filtered out by the price / market-cap screen or by still being in an open trade.
